2018-2019 FOREWORD

The Diocesan Cycle of Prayer gives focus to our prayer and intercession as communities connected with other communities both at home and around the world. While many in our United Dioceses know one another through a variety of ways and means, the Diocesan Cycle of Prayer helps us to focus our minds on the people we know in ways that are different from what we normally do. We enable ourselves and them to concentrate on what we often take for granted or are too embarrassed to explore – the spiritual side of their lives and ours. This helps to keep us focused on the tasks that God has given us to do and also on the grace that God has given us to fulfil the same. Names of people and of parishes familiar to us are connected afresh Sunday by Sunday as we pray our way around the dioceses in a spiritual rhythm that becomes entirely natural and instinctive in our Sunday observance.

Far too often in the Church of Ireland we forget that there always are people in ‘our church’ whom we do not know and who do not know us. What do they make of us? What do they make of our spiritual priorities? What sense do we give to them that we actively care for others who share the faith with us as together we play our part in equipping all God’s people for service of their neighbours and for going out into everyday life to tell the story of God’s love? The Cycle of Prayer is one way of showing that while we live in our parish we live spiritually outside our parish at the same time.

There is no limit to our neighbours. Holy Scripture – the story of God’s people Israel in Old and New Testaments – tells us this. Everyday life in Ireland tells us the same thing and so do our televisions and newspapers and the news prompts on our telephones. The world is brought before our eyes through a whole range of media and we cannot escape its impact or its power. And following the year 2018 when Ireland welcomed Pope Francis, the natural world and the environmental impact of production, pollution and changing climate patterns are also constantly to be remembered in our prayers as well as the people who suffer most through this. Climate and justice are words that instinctively fit together and challenge our convenience. It is always a delight to have the Diocese of Jerusalem feature in our Cycle as we feature in their Cycle. They are special partners in prayer and harbingers of hope.

I wish to thank the Reverend Canon Mark Gardner for his painstaking work of preparation and editing. I commend to you this publication and pray that in using it you will enjoy the sense of inclusion that God gives to all God’s children through prayer and intercession.

+Michael
